

returned home for a rest and change of food and cooler weather.

In the fall and winter months Mr. Beveridge visited small, weak, nearby assemblies in order to strengthen and help them in their testimony. He never traveled very far. I asked him once to accompany me to Chicago. I am afraid, he said, "that is too far." This is but a brief account of a few of the many self-sacrificing labors of our dear brother Mr. William Beveridge.

In demeanor Mr. Beveridge was grave and inclined to be too sober if that is possible. In conversation his words were few. He was distinctively a gospeller and of no mean ability. His passion and his warmth in his messages was very marked and inspiring. He used to say if sinners were not readily awakened; "we need more dynamite in our preaching," referring of course to Rom. 1:16. He was also a man of prayer, in the home, in private and in all his work he labored in prayer. Busy to his last few days visiting, reading and praying with needy saints. But the frail vessel began to break and in a ripe old age with a few days' sickness after an operation he passed away to his rest and reward to be with the Lord whom he loved to serve in simplicity and sincerity.

JAMES S. WAUGH

WITH THE LORD

DR. H. A. CAMERON, well known among the Lord's people as the editor of Assembly Annals passed into the presence of the Lord shortly after midnight February 5. Our brother was stricken at the business meeting of the elder brethren in the Central Gospel Hall shortly after ten on Monday night, Feb. 4.

Born in Scotland, seventy-seven years ago, our brother was converted at the age of sixteen when an orphan. His early Christian training in Marble Hall, Glasgow, under the leadership of able men including J. R. Caldwell left its mark on his life and labors, which in this country were more or less confined to Philadelphia, Waterbury, Conn., and Detroit. While living in Philadelphia, Hugh McEwen was in the doctor's Sunday School class.

The esteem in which our brother was held by all the assemblies in Detroit and by individual Christians was abundantly manifested at the funeral services which were conducted in the Central Gospel Hall, Lord's Day afternoon February 10. After the Hall was filled to its capacity as well as the Gallery, well over a hundred people were seated in the basement auditorium which was fitted with amplifiers. The services were conducted by brethren F. W. Mehl, W. J. Pell, W. F. Ferguson, and J. Govan.

Our brother Wm. J. Pell, who has been managing editor of Assembly Annals from its beginning states that the magazine will continue to be published D. V. and that no change in name or policy is anticipated.
